OPERA GIVEN IN DOGE'S PALACE. Seven Tons of Piano Playing

QUARTET TO MAKE TOUR

To the delight of lovers of music a novel experiment was made in Venice last month, says The London Telegraph correspondent from Venice. Puccini's opera "La Gioconda" was given at the Grand Theatre in the presence of the king. The performance in the vast court-yard of the palace of the Doges. The idea of giving the opera of Puccini in the open air was a first in which the story is supposed to have taken place but was mooted long ago, but always found some obstacle. The king's consent was granted. Venice is fond of choral music and festivals where everybody can join in. They always have a choir of people and on such occasions the gondoliers are busy and all smiles. But the idea of giving La Gioconda was no money-maker, and the king's opposition, there was danger of some trouble, and it was a question whether we were to see a riot or an opera.

Jozefy Boguslawski, Chicago pianist, got to wondering recently how much energy he used in playing a piece of music. So he got out a set of scales to test the force of his fingers' blows on the keyboard. He found that in the four minutes it took him to play Rubenstein's "Siciliano Etude," he exerted force of 34,786 pounds.

THIS GROWING CITY

Bank clearings during August were four and a half million dollars more than during the month of a year ago, amounting to more than twenty-four million, while the building permits issued brought the total for the first eight months of the year up to the two million mark.

These records provide confirmatory and conclusive evidence of the larger amount of business that is being done in the city and of the activity that is being shown in the building of residences and business quarters. Edmonton is a growing city. It is growing in population and in trade, probably more rapidly than any other city in the West; perhaps more rapidly, in comparison to size, than any other city in Canada.

The growth is healthy and sustained. There is no evidence of "boom" conditions. But month after month the bank clearings and building totals continue to show gains which are substantial. This process of improvement has now been going on for more than two years, and there is no sign of a slackening. On the contrary, the conditions prevailing in the country upon which the city depends for its prosperity seem never more favorable, and the outlook to that the advancement will continue with increasing momentum.

CO-OPERATION CALLED FOR

The order that has been issued by the city board of health, postponing for a week the opening of the schools and forbidding the attendance of children at public places for instruction or entertainment, is one which should be construed according to its spirit and intent, and not merely observed according to the wording of the restriction.

The board maintains it is that in the opinion of the health authorities it is not safe for children to gather in numbers, anywhere or for any purpose. Conversely stated, the more each child can for the time be kept away from other children, the less danger there will be that the disease will spread. The officials have known about as far as they can in applying this protective policy.

It remains for parents to second their efforts, and for the police and attendance at parties and gatherings to co-operate. While these authorities can prevent the youngsters congregating in public places, it is upon parents that the responsibility rests for securing as complete isolation as possible for each child or family.

Undoubtedly it seems like a hardship to tell a child that he must not play with the neighbors' children, and to cause such a measure to be misunderstood. This cannot be helped. Safety must come first. There is only one way to fight an epidemic of the kind; that is, to fight by every means that will prevent the spread of the contagion.

The more consistently the citizens generally follow up the lead that has been given by the board of health, the sooner the measure will disappear, and the ban can be lifted and the little ones allowed to resume their normal activities. There is no occasion for hysteria, or panic, but there is need for extraordinary resolution, possible, and that everyone do his part.

HEADING BACKWARD?

A nostalgic note with "An appreciation of dancing and jazz music is due to the mercurial rhythm inhering from our flagellate ferocities, and shows that we are still flagellates at heart." Thirty enough. That is a modern development, and counting for it, and anyway the jollyish cannot deny the charge.

But how does it account for it that the taste for jazz "music" is a modern development, and that the fact that jazz became popular during the last couple of decades? Well, these dormant faculties and lost art through all the intervening centuries since our remote ancestors climbed out of the ooze and began to sweat fat and heads? And are we really on the way back to the mollusc?

LABOR DAY

Canadians are a working people. Comparatively few of them, excepting the young and the aged, are not engaged in some kind of occupation, which by the use of brain or hand they seek to earn a livelihood or to accumulate wealth. The rich are as scarce here as the poor. To be employed at something is the accepted social duty of all of both sexes who are able to work. To be not at work is to be on the defensive. It is to tell the lazier ought to explain.

Because the life is a struggle of striving people, and of people who take satisfaction and pride in being workers, the one day that is set aside for general recognition of the dignity of labor is an anniversary in which Canadians are able to participate wholeheartedly. It requires no monumental effort on their part to realize the importance and the honorableness of labor, and their own consistent attitude, almost without exception.

Few of our pupils, holidays are better observed than Labor day. Business is suspended everywhere, save the farm, and the harvesting operations forbid the loss of time even for a day's purpose. The country over, all who are in position to do so take the day off, and by public celebration or private leisure, pay tribute to the industry by which life under civilized conditions is made possible.

No holiday is more worthy of observance. It is intelligently directed labor that enables man to live better than the animals. All the material things of life come as the result of labor. All that we hope for a better and more prosperous country is based upon the understanding that work is the only thing that can bring improvement. If work ceased humanity would almost lack into the mire again. The significance of Labor day is something that deserves the thought of everyone who is capable of realizing what would be a worse fate for man and how dependent we are upon it.

Lost Battles

By EDGAR E. GUEST

Oh, when the first I met her,
And when her feet came down
And when those lips were laughter drips
Began to wear a smile between the smile
Above the feet I sought to hold
That smile I knew was "Let it go."
You're right, but what's the use?

And will she go when I would stay,
Or stay when I would go?
No more I'll find what change her mind,
No more I'll find "Let it go."
For when there comes a doubtful point,
And uncertainty is on the air,
I know her face, though right or wrong,
I'll do the giving in.

Time was I wasted time and words
And course of a kind,
Believing that might be
Induced to change her mind;
And when she came, she came
And off at once I went
For large and small I call recall
One battle she has won.

So when the first I met her,
And when her feet came down
And when those lips were laughter drips
Began to wear a smile between the smile
Above the feet I sought to hold
That smile I knew was "Let it go."
You're right, but what's the use?

"Time was in the days of our grandmothers when a perfect lady was not supposed to possess anything much—Fresh meat or grapes. Dinner—Alcohol and the chin."

Remember the average man like the London bus driver. A lady was climbing up the rear stairs of a bus in London, and the driver said to her, "You are a bit of a mess, aren't you?"

Whether they may have been, they are certainly no more so to-day.

Have the morals of the female sex of the race deteriorated because females show more of their other limbs? No. Morals is a word which comes from more than one source. It is a word which is largely what you are used to. It is a word which is largely what you are used to. It is a word which is largely what you are used to.

MUST LEARN HOW TO USE GOOD ROADS

MONTREAL, Sept. 2.—The views of Hon. Geo. R. Henry, minister of highways in Ontario, offer to some extent from those of his brother engineers in Quebec, in matters pertaining to the control of traffic.

Mr. Henry maintains that publicity and education will make the highways safer than any other legal enactment. His method of attacking the problem in the matter of safety have attracted considerable attention, and he is also president of the Canadian Road Funds association, it is certain that various methods of traffic control will be the subject of discussion during the annual meeting at Niagara Falls on September 28 and 29 next.

Warning Against Loitering

Only a few days ago Mr. Henry had an advertisement printed in many Ontario papers calling attention to several rules for safety. Among these rules appeared for the first time a warning to motorists not to loiter on the main highways.

It is a warning to the effect that many complaints that motorists slow down have been coming in from the highways. It is looking to bring lines of traffic to a standstill, and it is also warning that the highways are not to be used as a place where motorists can loiter and cause a delay in the traffic.

Mr. Henry's advice is that motorists who are merely out for pleasure drive that if they desire to stop, they should do so in a place where they can be seen by the traffic. He also advises that the highways are not to be used as a place where motorists can loiter and cause a delay in the traffic.

Driving Too Close is Dangerous Practice

A good driving rule is to always keep at least 15 feet behind the motorist ahead of you while traveling at a speed of more than 15 miles an hour. It is suggested by the public safety department of the Automobile Club of Southern California. It is the best way to prevent damaged cars, cuts from flying glass and other injuries in collisions.

Keeping street cars in flitting with serious injury or death, it is also pointed out. A motorist can't change its course and it may even when head-on collisions or a motorist's corner. Because of street cars from the opposite direction, the auto club suggests. Don't assume a car has passed just because you can see its tracks.

Penalty for Every Accident, is Plan

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 3.—"Let's stress and promote all drivers who are in any way involved in accidents, and we'll make the streets safer for traffic."

This is the novel idea of E. R. Lott, public safety manager of the Automobile club of Southern California.

He bases this on the assumption that, practically every accident is due to criminal negligence or recklessness. Sometimes both drivers in an accident are at fault. Penalties, he says, and traffic law violations will be reduced.

The law, says Lott, is the best way to make the streets safer. The public safety manager of the Automobile club of Southern California.

3 years from today You Will Know

YOU would require three years of arduous day-to-day driving to know as much about Chevrolet performance and endurance as the General Motors Proving Grounds brings out in a few months.

There's strength—stability—ruggedness built into every inch of the Chevrolet Chassis; into its beautiful body by Fisher; into every detail of its powerful engine.

After years of trouble-free driving, you will know that Chevrolet has added to its economy, its smoothness, its power and its beauty, the greatest measure of Strength and Endurance ever possessed by any low-priced car. Ask your Chevrolet dealer for a demonstration.

DOROTHY DIX

They say that I am a little of a few words, happy as well for this. My husband, who is 27, was unusually kind of his mother who died a month before I met him. He says that his mother will always have been a little of a few words, happy as well for this.

Answer: You can use a little common sense and refrain from borrowing trouble. The thought of the little girl who searched and searched until she found the mother of her mother, who had been a little of a few words, happy as well for this.

Suppose that he were neglecting you and running around with some pretty little, low-haired, flapper. Suppose, even, that your mother-in-law were alive and that she was a disreputable and cantankerous old woman with whom you had to live and who interfered with everything you did and put her meddling old fingers in every pie.

Then you would have some reason for cursing on the streets and beating your breast of fortune and fate. But to be jealous of a nursery and let that spoil all the sweetness of your life! How ridiculous!

But I think that you and your husband are two nice people. You are solidly doing things together. For anyone to quarrel like that in natural emotion, who is silly enough to tell you that his mother came first, with him, certainly he knows nothing of feminine psychology if he be not aware that that remark would rankle any woman's breast, that it would make her angry and that he would never have the last of it.

Keep your husband in his place as wrong and foolish to keep continually throwing his affection for his mother in your face. He is not to be kept on chewing up his past in perpetual agony.

It is silly for a man even to bring his love for his wife and his mother in contrast, because they are two entirely different things. They are not alike in any respect. You might just as well ask him whether he preferred rice to be eaten as to sugar, which he loved the better, his wife or his mother.

Your husband never carried his marriage before his mother did simply because he had a happy life in his own home. He found out quickly enough that mother love didn't suffice him and that he wanted the love of his wife.

In his particular case, his love for his mother has become a mental obsession. He is not a normal man. You can argue with this, but you can't win. He is a man who is not a normal man.

It really means nothing. It takes nothing from you that is yours, and you are very foolish to let it make you miserable. You can't win. He is a man who is not a normal man.

Don't be jealous of your husband's love for his mother. Some day you will have a husband who loves you more than he loves his mother. You will have a husband who loves you more than he loves his mother.

Answer: All the trade in your hospital and generally all of us are victimized by a head-bank. Borrowers are not only intrinsically so, but in the eyes of the lender. A small, temporary favor which would seem negligible to us in return.

Also, the trade on your hospital and generally all of us are victimized by a head-bank. Borrowers are not only intrinsically so, but in the eyes of the lender. A small, temporary favor which would seem negligible to us in return.

That work both ways, because they not only get what they want without having to pay for it, but they also do not have to be grateful, as they would if we gave them what they asked for outright.

So they borrow our books and never return them. They borrow our automobile and send them back with a broken spring and punctured tires and so on to the bank. They borrow our jewelry and then they borrow our clothes and get spots on them, and there is no greater pay for the use.

You can generally get rid of the borrower, who borrows money by lending him or her a dollar more than he asked for, and you can frequently stop a borrower who has borrowed a dollar or two by giving him or her a dollar more than he asked for.

The only way really to circumvent the borrower is by having enough backbone to refuse to lend. That saves you money and trouble and makes enemies for borrowers invariably dislike the lender who they borrow from.

Answer: How do you think that I can prevent my girl from the slightest bit of love? You can't. You can't prevent her from the slightest bit of love. You can't prevent her from the slightest bit of love.

What is true love? And on what do you base your theory that the modern girl is lacking in it?

So far as I can see, girls are just as anxious to be loved and to love as they were, and they are just as foolish about the kind of men they choose. Their brains are just as sound and they make just as sound marriages.

The modern girl is accused of being hard-boiled, but it doesn't keep her from stepping up to the plate with her head and heart. She is just as much of a girl as the girl of a generation ago.

Life is a mighty thing, something without any love in it. It is a life that you can get to be thankful for. It is a life that you can get to be thankful for.
